Rye Grass... Top Quality Hoffman Seed to protect your soil . . . make heavy growth to turn under

There's no way to get your topsoil back after it's gone . . . it's just common sense to do everything you can to keep it where it belongs.

Probably the part of your rotation most vulnerable to erosion is your corn acreage. No cornfield should be without the protection of rye grass . . . no other cover crop can equal its washing-prevention value.

Rye grass also lets you use more of the rain that falls on your cornfields . . . it improves soil permeability, so rain is absorbed, not shed. When plowed under, it adds organic matter to the soil equal to that in many tons of manure. This feature is of great benefit to the crops that follow on the same land. Also, the quick-growing ability of rye grass helps discourage weeds.

In cornfields, 20 pounds of seed to the acre is the usual sowing rate . . . at the last corn cultivation.

Rye grass is a versatile crop . . . put it to use wherever possible in your farming program. Potato growers make good use of its cover crop value. Orchard men, too. Use it in your garden after early vegetable crops. It's a good idea to always have some rye grass seed on hand, for whatever soil protection job might come up.

There IS a difference

Just as in anything else you buy . . . there are different grades of rye grass seed. The seed now in stock here for you is strictly top notch in every way. 99% or better purity, 90% or better germination. At today's Hoffman prices, figuring 20 pounds to the acre, you're spending only $3 or less per acre for this soil-saving insurance.

Here's seed you can depend on being cleaned right . . . seed that will give you quick, vigorous growth. Order your needs today, and have your rye grass seed ready to sow last time you cultivate corn.
